The Telegraph. Up to a late hour last night the line between Vincennes and Louisville was down. No dispatches have passed over that line since Saturday afternoon, causing a loss to the Company of about $500, and much inconvenience to the public. One gentleman in this city lost $150 by the line being down yesterday. The line will probably be up today, and our usual report will be furnished to-morrow morning.

THE Washington Star gives a complete list of the killed and wounded, embracing eight killed and twenty-three wounded, and says:

The moral of this whole affair should never be forgotten. It is that a mob, though always ferocious, vindictive and cruel, where a timid community is the subject of its tyr-anny, has no courage to withstand the strong and determined arm that is nerved by the authority of the law. The mob yesterday vanished from before a single velley of musketry as the slightest snow beneath a summer sun. Now that it is understood, also; that the property of the United States Gov-ernment in this city will be promptly protect-ed by the soldiery of the Government, it is Boughton W H not likely to be again put in jeopardy.

We have seen riots in various parts of the country quelled by the same means. The members of a mob are always cowardly. The Crome & Harkins least show of courage and determination conquers them.
